To the Admissions Committee,

I am delighted to write in strong support of Robin Kessler's application. I have known Robin for three years, first as a student in my graduate Machine Learning Theory course and subsequently as a research collaborator on sparse attention mechanisms for transformer models.

Robin ranked first among sixty students in my course, but what distinguishes them is independence of thought: our collaboration on learned attention routing began from a question Robin raised after class, and it grew into a paper now under review at a major venue. Robin writes careful proofs, builds working systems to test their own hypotheses, and communicates clearly with both theorists and engineers — a rare combination.

I recommend Robin without reservation and am confident they will thrive in a rigorous research environment. Please feel free to contact me with any questions.

Sincerely,
